Commenting on the new season Artistic Director Vicky Featherstone said;

"Theatre is a civic space - a space to hold, challenge and illuminate the questions of our times whether personal, national or global. This season does that. We are honoured at the Royal Court that these writers, theatre-makers and musicians are trusting their unflinching, yet often vulnerable stories and journeys with us to place before you - so we may be enlightened, shocked, entertained, moved and changed. Many of these artists have never worked with us before, many are at the start of their journey and others more experienced are returning to the very personal to make sense of where we are right now. We are honoured to give them our building."

Cyprus Avenue

Written by David Ireland

Directed by Vicky Featherstone

Co-produced with the Abbey Theatre

Jerwood Theatre Downstairs

Thursday 14 February 2019 – Saturday 16 March 2019

Following sell-out runs at The Public Theater, New York, Ireland's Abbey Theatre, The MAC Belfast and the Royal Court Theatre, London, David Ireland's critically acclaimed black comedy Cyprus Avenue will return to the Royal Court for a limited four week run Thursday 14 February 2019 – Saturday 16 March 2019 in the Jerwood Theatre Downstairs.

Stephen Rea, who won Best Actor for his portrayal of Eric Miller at The Irish Times Theatre Awards in 2017, will return with the production. Further cast to be announced.

Directed by Royal Court Artistic Director Vicky Featherstone, Cyprus Avenue won Best New Play at the Irish Times Theatre Awards and James Tait Black Prize for Drama in 2017.

Cyprus Avenue takes one man's identity crisis to the limits to uncover the modern day complexity of Ulster Loyalism.

"Gerry Adams has disguised himself as a new-born baby and successfully infiltrated my family home."

Eric is a Belfast Loyalist. He believes his five-week old granddaughter is Gerry Adams. His family keep telling him to stop living in the past and fighting old battles that nobody cares about anymore but his cultural heritage is under siege. He must act.

"Without prejudice we're nothing! If we don't discriminate, we don't survive!"

With design by Lizzie Clachan, Lighting Design by Paul Keogan and Sound Design by David McSeveney.

"When Stephen Rea makes his entrance in "Cyprus Avenue," David Ireland's bruising play at the Public Theater, it's with a gait both wary and defiant. From the way he measures his steps, you might think there were land mines beneath the blank white surface of the stage"

Ben Brantley, New York Times

“Ireland is writing about the danger of living in the past and using murderous violence as a means of re-enacting battles long ago. In a world where sectarian divisions remain as potent as ever, I’d have thought that was a point well worth making”

Michael Billington, The Guardian

“David Ireland’s shocking new play balances humour and horror, with Stephen Rea superb”

Susannah Clapp, Observer

The production, which was previously in the Jerwood Theatre Upstairs, transfers to the Jerwood Theatre Downstairs where the space will be reconfigured to include onstage seating.

Cyprus Avenue is a Royal Court Theatre and Abbey Theatre production.

It is an Abbey Theatre Commission.

The original production at the Royal Court in 2016 was supported by Cockayne Grants for the Arts, a donor-advised fund of the London Community Foundation.

Brexit Big Band & Leavers' Assembly

Friday 29 and Saturday 30 March 2019

In order to mark the allotted date for the UK leaving the EU, the Royal Court Theatre are hosting Matthew Herbert's Brexit Big Band and choir in concert. The Royal Court will also be inviting artists from across the UK and Europe to contribute in some way to a Leavers' Assembly (taken from the ritual of school leavers going from Primary into Secondary – some are thrilled and some want to stay where they are but both have to acknowledge that change is happening).

Composer and musician Matthew Herbert started his Brexit Big Band project when article 50 was triggered and it is following the Brexit process culminating in an album released on Friday 29 March 2019 when the UK is due to leave. This concert will be the final event of that epic two year journey.

A celebration of collaboration and the imagination, the project has recorded and performed across Europe with 1000 musicians and singers, as well as sounds recorded walking the Northern Irish border, swimming the channel and flying a WW2 plane.

www.brexitbigband.eu

Events will take place across the building on Friday 29 and Saturday 30 March 2019.

More details to follow.

Passages: A Windrush Celebration

Seven Films for Seven Decades

Writers include Rikki Beadle-Blair, Natasha Gordon, Kwame Kwei-Armah, Lynette Linton, Winsome Pinnock, Jamael Westman and Roy Williams.

Curated and produced by Lynette Linton and Christopher Haydon

Saturday 13 April 2019

Royal Court Theatre Jerwood Theatre Downstairs

To mark seventy years after the arrival of passenger liner V Empire Windrush at Tilbury Docks, Essex, and in response to the recent Windrush scandal, writer/director Lynette Linton has commissioned and is curating Passages: A Windrush Celebration, a series of seven monologue films presented by the Royal Court Theatre.

Writers include Rikki Beadle-Blair, Natasha Gordon, Kwame Kwei-Armah, Lynette Linton, Winsome Pinnock, Jamael Westman and Roy Williams. The films, which focus on the British West Indian experience, will be released weekly online later this year.

Passages: A Windrush Celebration will culminate in a day of celebration on Saturday 13 April 2019 which will include food, music, panel events and a screening of all seven films, held at the Royal Court theatre.

Lynette Linton, who is of Guyanese heritage, said;

'I always knew I wanted to create something around the Windrush generation. It's a part of British history. Yet, I hadn't been taught about it at school. Why? If it hadn't been for my own personal connection, I wouldn't have known much about this period at all. And then the scandal happened. And I wasn't even surprised. I was and am still angry. Frustrated. Desperate to do something.

I wanted to find a way of celebrating how much our parents and grandparents have contributed to this country while acknowledging the struggle too. So I spoke to those with West Indian heritage around me, as well as artists I respected, and asked for their opinion. How do we honour this anniversary? What did we want to say? How do we give a voice to our community in a time where we should be celebrating our legacy but instead we're worrying for our grandparents' safety?

Passages: A Windrush Celebration is our contribution to this debate. I am thrilled to be working alongside so many artists from my community that I admire and respect. We wouldn't be here without the Windrush generation. It is time for us to tell our story using our own words."

Passages: A Windrush Celebration will be produced by Christopher Haydon, Black Apron Entertainment, Misfit films and the Royal Court theatre.

"It's just a fun ad. Now the whole world is going crazy"

In Singapore, Clearday™ has developed from a small start-up company to a leading international cosmetic brand in less than a year.

But when a draft of the company's latest skin cream advert is leaked, the video goes viral globally for all the wrong reasons.

YouTube views are in the thousands and keep climbing; anger is building on social media; and journalists are starting to cover the story. This is an international PR nightmare; the company cannot be seen to be racist- they've got to get it taken down before America wakes up.

"It's on BUZZFEED. It's on BUZZFEED. We're not defending it"

Tuesday 14 May 2019 – Saturday 1 June 2019

A journey to the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean.

In February 2016, two artists got on a cargo ship, and retraced one of the routes of the Transatlantic Slave Triangle - from the UK to Ghana to Jamaica, and back.

Their memories, their questions and their grief took them along the bottom of the Atlantic and through the figurative realm of an imaginary past.

It was a long journey backwards, in order to go forwards.

This show is what they brought back.

"We imagine that we are on a journey, that life is a journey, but we are home from the beginning. This is not an easy thing to accept."

Part of artist Selina Thompson's wider body of work looking at Black British identity, the award-winning salt. focuses on grief, home, afropressism, the Black Atlantic, the forgetting of the UK's colonial history and the impact that has on the daily life of Caribbean communities in the UK today.

the end of history...

Written by Jack Thorne

Directed by John Tiffany

Jerwood Theatre Downstairs

Thursday 27 June 2019 – Saturday 10 August 2019

The Royal Court Theatre presents the end of history..., a new play by Jack Thorne. Directed by Royal Court Theatre Associate Director John Tiffany with design by Grace Smart, lighting by Jack Knowles and sound by Tom Gibbons.

the end of history... runs in the Jerwood Theatre Downstairs Thursday 27 June 2019 – Saturday 10 August 2019 with press night on Wednesday 3 July 2019, 7pm.

“No talent at all when it comes to cooking - as you will discover - but when it comes to pissing off my children - immense talent - Olympian talent.”

Newbury, 1997. Sal is attempting a cook dinner for the family. She and husband David have pulled off a coup and gathered their brood back home for the weekend.

Eldest son Carl is bringing his new girlfriend to meet everyone for the first time; middle daughter Polly is back from Cambridge University for the occasion; and youngest Tom will hopefully make it out of detention in time for dinner.

Sal and David would rather feed their kids with leftist ideals and welfarism than fancy cuisine. When you've named each of your offspring after your socialist heroes, you've given them a lot to live up to...

“When I was your age I wanted to be in a band and sleep with Mick Jagger - and Jimi Hendrix - so who am I to judge the choices you've made so far?”

The Royal Court Theatre and Kudos Writing Fellowships

The Royal Court Theatre and Kudos television production company have created three new Fellowships for writers already establishing a career. The fellowships will offer three writers a £10,000 bursary to support themselves in order to focus purely on their writing for six months.

The Royal Court and Kudos are specifically looking for writers who perceive that there are barriers to getting their work developed and produced in theatre and television because of class, disability, education, ethnicity, gender identity, geography or any other barrier.

The three £10,000 bursaries (with additional travel and accommodation expenses covered) will support writers for a period of six months from January 2019. During this time, they will be able to take part in and challenge the work of the Royal Court and Kudos.

There will also be opportunities to see productions, meet theatre and television writers who have significantly contributed to both forms and have ongoing artistic conversations with staff at the Royal Court and Kudos.

For the past two years the Royal Court has collaborated with Kudos to deliver bespoke writers groups. This partnership forged a relationship between the organisations and has focused on developing new talent for television and theatre.

The Fellowships are a way to begin relationships with writers who feel they wouldn't otherwise have access to either organisation.

Commenting on the opportunity writer Rachel De-lahay states;

"I had a full time job, a weekend job, shared a bed with my best mate and wrote in the evenings. It didn't even occur to me there could be another way. Even when I was paid to write for the first time the money seemed so finite and I couldn't trust it would come again. And when you have to pay rent with no support network a regular income is a necessity. To take that pressure away would be invaluable. I just wish there were more!"

Stacey Gregg adds;

"Starting out as a writer is daunting for anyone, but the extra anxiety of being away from home and without a financial safety net can mean the difference between taking that risk or opportunity you might otherwise pass on. This bursary buys time and head space to get that draft written, to take meetings, to stop worrying about the next train fare, allowing you to build the connections and understanding of an industry that might otherwise remain behind a veil.

When I set out from university I was holding down three jobs and had no idea how to enter or behave in a professional environment. I slept on floors and wrote at night after work. My parents couldn't help and I couldn't explain. I was the first to go to university let alone show an interest in the arts. I got fired a lot. A lot. I blagged my way into meetings and then panicked about how I could deliver when the gig was unpaid or they expected you to access a printer or travel or take time off work or split the bill at some fancy restaurant. Knowing how to find guidance was a total mystery to me and there seemed so few other souls from my background. I felt like I couldn't be coolly articulate about writing those voices I was most passionate about - working class Northern Irish - like I spoke in a different language to people who made decisions about commissioning, but that if I wrote it, people could see it. So that's what I did. Writers write. Meetings were a clusterfuck for me until I'd written more, and that required time and confidence, and quite often that meant money. The first time a theatre sent me on a weeks writing retreat after I'd begged them to just fire me I cried the whole way on the bus and felt like a famous person. I am so heartened that a fellowship like this one might go some way to addressing these obstacles for some brilliant writers the world ought to know."

Writer Dennis Kelly comments;

"We often talk of the barriers writers who are starting out encounter, but for many of us there are things to be overcome before we even start putting pen to paper. Whilst our theatre is in great shape and there's some fantastic out there work that's genuinely pushing back boundaries, I do worry that if I were I to be starting out today I wouldn't see myself reflected on our stage and I'd think 'that's not the place for me'. This isn't about rejecting the work of today, but if we want to ensure a plurality of voices we need to make a real and concerted effort to address the socio-economic hurdles that make potential playwrights self-select and edit themselves out of the story of our theatre. This bursary is certainly a step in the right direction - it's something that will make a very real difference to three people who are out there right now, wondering whether they should continue."

Writer Jack Thorne adds;

"I think every writer thinks their generation has it the hardest, that the generation before had chances or opportunities that they lacked, but I've got to say I think right now - at a time when we need new writing the most - breaking into the 'arts' feels like an impossible task, particularly if you're not able to be supported by the bank of Mum and Dad. I was lucky, my brother let me stay cheaply at his in Croydon and I was able to get some teaching work, but even with that I got very good at knowing when the different supermarkets marked down their foods for the day. When I look at writing for theatre and TV - yes, I realise I'm part of the problem here - I do find the names I'm see become depressingly familiar. That's the reason why these Kudos scholarships are so important - for writers not only who see barriers entering the profession, but barriers writing a little at all. These fellowships will bring vital new voices to the fore and let them sing whatever songs they want."

The Royal Court Theatre is the leading force in world theatre for energetically cultivating writers – undiscovered, emerging and established. Kudos is one of the world's leading television production companies, who are passionate programme makers specialising in scripted content.

The Royal Court and Kudos will choose three writers who they believe, with this support, will go on to make a significant contribution to theatre and TV and the cultural life of the UK and beyond.

Writers who present the world in new and unfamiliar ways through the originality of their voice, exceptional skill and bold execution of ideas should apply.

Application deadline 16 November 2018.

International Residency for Emerging Playwrights: 2019 Focus Europe Royal Court Theatre

The Royal Court Theatre announces a special focus for its 2019 International Residency for Emerging Playwrights. For the first time since its inception thirty years ago the Residency will be offered to 10 European playwrights - marking the year Brexit is scheduled to happen.

In 1989 the Royal Court Theatre created a pioneering International Residency, inviting emerging playwrights from around the world to spend time at the theatre developing a new play. Many playwrights who have taken part in the Residency over the past thirty years have gone on to have their work produced in their home countries and their work has become a key strand of the repertoire of the Royal Court.

The first Royal Court International Residency was in 1989, the year the Berlin Wall came down, transforming Europe. Thirty years on, the International Residency in 2019 will have a special focus on Europe, marking the year Brexit is scheduled to happen. This Residency is a statement that, Brexit or not, the Royal Court Theatre remains an international theatre and will never cut itself off from writers in the rest of Europe. That was true from the theatre's creation in 1956, when the Royal Court championed Brecht, Beckett and Ionesco, and remains the commitment today.

The Royal Court opens the doors to unheard voices and free thinkers living in European neighbour states. Inviting emerging playwrights to apply who through their writing can change our way of seeing. The International Residency seeks restless, alert, provocative writing from writers living in the Europe of the Twenty-first Century, but who may have come there from any part of the world.

The Residency has introduced the Royal Court to writers from every continent and has often been a starting point for wider relationships with more playwrights in their countries.

Since 1989 Royal Court International Residency participants have come from:

Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bangladesh, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Cuba, Czech Republic, Denmark, Egypt, Eritrea, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, India, Iran, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Kenya, Republic of Korea, Kosovo, Lebanon, Macedonia, Malaysia, Mexico, Montenegro, Morocco, The Netherlands, New Zealand, Nigeria, Norway, Palestine, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Quebec, Romania, Russia, Serbia, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sweden, Switzerland, Syria, Tanzania, Thailand, Trinidad, Turkey, Uganda, Ukraine, United Kingdom, United States, Uruguay, Venezuela, Zambia

This is the first time the International Residency has had a specific focus for one year. Recent Royal Court plays by International Residency playwrights include A Time to Reap by Anna Wakulik (Poland), B by Guillermo Calderón (Chile), Bad Roads by Natal'ya Vorozhbit (Ukraine), Djinns of Eidgah by Abhishek Majumdar (India), Disconnect, Free Outgoing by Anupama Chandrasekhar (India), Fireworks by Dalia Taha (Palestine), Minfield by Lola Arias (Argentina), Our Private Life by Pedro Rozo (Colombia), The Stone, The Ugly One and Fireface by Marius von Mayenburg (Germany) and Way to Heaven by Juan Mayorga (Spain).

The International Residency takes place at the Royal Court Theatre, Sloane Square, London 30 June – 20 July 2019. Applications for the 2019 Residency are invited from emerging playwrights currently living in any European Union member country (except the UK). The application form and information about all documents needed for submissions can be viewed here.

The deadline for applications is 9 November 2018.

CLEAN BREAK

Clean Break changes lives and changes minds through theatre – on stage, in prison and in the community. It produces ground-breaking plays with women writers and actors at the heart of its work. Founded in 1979 by two women prisoners who believed that theatre could bring the hidden stories of imprisoned women to a wider audience, it is still the only theatre company of its kind remaining true to these roots; inspiring playwrights and captivating audiences with the company's award winning plays on the complex theme of women and crime.

Its commissioned playwrights have included Zawe Ashton, Alice Birch, Deborah Bruce, Lin Coghlan, E V Crowe, Vivienne Franzmann, Tanika Gupta, Katie Hims, Sam Holcroft, Theresa Ikoko, Lucy Kirkwood, Chloë Moss, Rebecca Lenkiewicz, Winsome Pinnock and Rebecca Prichard.

Recent success for the company has included receiving a Tonic Award for its dedication to changing women's lives through theatre and commitment to new writing. Thick as Thieves by Katherine Chandler, the company's first co-production with Theatr Clwyd premiered on 17 October 2018, before a tour of UK theatre and prison tour. Other activity during 2018 has included Alice Birch's [BLANK] - a co-commission with National Theatre Connections (which was performed by young people around the UK and at the National Theatre); participating in Artichoke's Processions project; and Belong, created by a group of young women with Natasha Marshall, Clean Break's Channel 4 Playwright In Residence and winner of a Most Promising New Playwright Offie for Half Breed.

They have established a track record of producing work which shines a spotlight on Black artists, creating theatre for diverse audiences across the country. Mounting more than fifty productions over their 30-year history, recent productions have included collaborations with the Royal Exchange; Guys & Dolls, King Lear (in association with Birmingham Repertory Theatre) and All My Sons (Royal Exchange Theatre, UK tour), and new work including Girls by Theresa Ikoko (co-production with Soho Theatre, HighTide) and Half Breed by Natasha Marshall (co-production with Soho Theatre).

The Royal Court's International Playwrights' Programme encourages emerging playwrights to address subjects they feel are urgent in their societies. In more than seventy countries and over forty languages writers have felt inspired to write provocative new plays for our times. Some of these writers have worked under incredible hardships in fractured societies.

Through long term collaborations, this distinctive body of work has enriched our own theatre culture and the new writing culture in the many countries where the work has taken place. Long term play development relationships, projects and exchanges exist between the Royal Court and writers in countries including Argentina, Brazil, China, Chile, Cuba, Germany, India, Lebanon, Mexico, Palestine, Peru, Russia, Spain, South Africa, Syria, Turkey, Uruguay and Zimbabwe.

The International Department has pioneered the use of theatre practitioners as translators and the integral involvement of the translator in the play development and rehearsal process.
